TO THE EDITOR OF THE POLYNESIAN.

SIR: Soliciting your indulgence in finally noticing Student, or a Student, &c., in regard to his or her complimentary specimens of education, as "juice disturbing the brain," anti-missionary, "temperance," "anti-student," "ears sticking out," italics, alias, donkey (I suppose), I refer him to the 14th chapter of Proverbs, 16th verse, and 12th chapter, 15th verse—where he will find a cap to fit him much better than any he has ever yet worn. In useless replying to him; but as one of his inuendoes—the first quoted—involves a great error of impression and profanity in consequences, in assuming that use of wine involves the necessary violation of a virtue of "temperance" (though inapplicable in charge personally, as to use), I will quote for his enlightenment and general benefit, what the learned and pious Dr. Cummins says on the subject. His remarks are as follow: "Not given to much wine—not the prohibition of it, but its limitation, what is called the teetotal principle had been apostolic one, I do submit, it would have been a 'not tasting wine,' but it is not so—some may have fore be taken. The wine in those days must have been alcoholic wine. The wine in the East is about 7 per cent. alcohol. If there was none, as did the Apostle say, 'not given to much wine' would not say, not given to much water, because there was no risk of injury. The very fact that limits the quantity, shows that the wine then was alcoholic or stimulating, and that it requires restraint, regulation—not prohibition. It is a question open for discussion, whether the best example is total abstinence from it, or the moderate use of it." (Paul recommends it for health; our Saviour both used it and encouraged others to do it, only for health, but at a feast.) "Those only wrong who base prohibition upon the Bible."

I beg leave to say, once for all, if those who maintain second only and subservient in their study can believe that the liberty of use is in perfect consonance with the sacred virtue of temperance to all the evil eye of party—to be a firm and consistent friend to missionaries and missions, while action and measures are open to investigation and opinion—that it is possible to be a genuine friend and supporter of colleges without being under any necessity of approving their being reared prematurely on ruins or in the place of common preparatory schools suitable as an introduction—and that it is possible to take a gratifying interest in seeing students at feet of Gamaliel, and to object to their mounting Gamaliel's chair before they have learned half his lessons.

If such are to constitute the "minds" which are come out of the college walls, to move in high positions of government service, and help build up a nation, &c., alas! for the result. They may advantageously gain some knowledge of the elements of ethical philosophy, which does not seem to have been a study, by reading "A. P.'s" luminous timely letter in your last, and also of Com Sense—the most valuable of all.

"A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring;
There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
But drinking largely sobers us again."

TRUE

The Utah Question in Washington.

A Washington correspondent, after protesting against the continuance of the present arbitrary power in the hands of one man, who sways destinies of Utah, and is arrayed against the Union, thus speaks of what is known at the of Government relative to the Territory:

"The Judges are expelled, and the records destroyed, of all Courts which do not act under Brigham Young's orders. Every man who complies of Brigham's misrule, or expresses a desire to leave the Territory, is either assassinated or despoiled of his property. We have here now one or two who left the Territory on account of Young's tyranny, and whose goods and all other tangible property were seized upon and confiscated. Judge Drummond estimates the population of Utah fifty thousand. Gov. Young says it is eighty thousand. Judge Williams, of Iowa, who is well acquainted with the Territory, says it does not exceed forty thousand.

"About one-half of the people are American the other immigrant foreigners. Upon the honor and subjection of the latter class Brigham Young's power mostly depends. The Americans have become insubordinate, and many of these are to abandon the Territory and the whole organization, political and religious; but as they have interests at stake, they cannot do this without great sacrifice. If the federal Government would rebel against Brigham's rule at once, pledge themselves to bring the whole community under the restraint of law. The Federal Government must, therefore, back their authority in with an army at least as numerous as that which Brigham has at his command. He has now a daily drill, an army of twenty-five hundred, desperate and fanatical men, mostly foreigners, who are restrained by no sympathies either with American laws and institutions or of the American people, against whom they are ordered to use their Bowie knives. Brigham is big and well he may, considering that, so far as has had his own way, and has laughed to scorn the power of two Federal Administrations, and another one, as he thinks, 'upon the hip squatter sovereignty.' He has avowed his determination to fight for squatter's rights of self-government. But if the new Governor is backed by efficient force under Gen. Harney, no opposition will be made; it is a clear case for the execution of moral force—'cannons loaded and exploded.'"
